NAZI SABOTEURS GO ON TRIAL TODAY

Nazi Drive Slowed Down, Russians Report

SAY GERMANS HURLED BACK AT DON RIVER

Reds Report Counter-Attack Wipes Out Bridgehead and Checks Break-Through.

By The Associated Press

Counter-attacking Red army troops were reported late today to be wiping out German bridgeheads on the east bank of the Don river and hurling back all further enemy attempts to cross the stream in fierce fighting west of Voronezh.

Recoiling after the first violent shock of an offensive by 70,000 German troops, Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's armies were pictured as checking the 125-mile Nazi break through and inflicting huge losses.

Soviet dispatches from the flaming battlefront said heavy combats still raged along the river, but declared that light Nazi forces which reached the east bank were smashed and the bulk of the Nazi invaders were held on the west bank.

The German claim of the capture of Voronezh by reinforced Nazi troops which streamed across the Don river 10 miles west of the city went unconfirmed. The Soviet information bureau declared that the withering fire of massed Russian tanks had beaten off bitter German assaults upon a height in the chalky hills just west of Voronezh.

Red army men gave ground in two areas of the Staryi Oskol sector and counterattacked in another to pile up a toll of 2,800 Germans killed and 35 tanks destroyed, it was announced. Both before Staryi Oskol and Voronezh, the Russians said, their guns flamed through the night, rounding out a two-month defense against regional German offensives.

Meet Twin Drives

Violent combat was reported in both these sectors of the upper Don basin as the Russians battled twin drives to the east from the Kursk-Kharkov zone dangerously attacking the Red army communications.

The invasion salient apparently widened slowly.

Heavy pressure before Staryi Oskol, a rail town of 22,000 on the Oskol river 65 miles southwest of Voronezh, forced the Russians to withdraw to new positions, but only after they had exacted a heavy toll, the Soviet information bureau announced.

"In one of the sectors the Germans hurled about 200 tanks and a large infantry force into the attack," it said. "The Hitlerites were firmly met by artillerymen, trench mortar crews, anti-tank riflemen and tankists."

A Soviet tank detachment holding a sector in the river basin west of Voronezh killed 700 Germans and demolished 14 of their tanks in a day's action, it was announced.

Two-Month Record

The Germans have cleared the Crimea and shouldered back the Red army with more or less success on a 150-mile line of the southern front since starting 1942 offensive operations on the Kerch peninsula two months ago today, pushing across the Caucasus.

All German gains in this period amount probably total less than [illegible] square miles, in contrast to the 250,000 square miles occupied in the first two months of the Russian war.

Russia's southern line sags deepest under the weight of Nazi drive near Stalingrad, at Voronezh, 130 miles north of Kursk.

The Germans hold Kupyansk, 100 miles southwest of Voronezh, as the result of a 60-mile drive from their base at Kharkov. They are eating up Red army positions [illegible] Otherwise, the long [illegible] front is essentially as it has been for months.

JAPS ATTEMPT RAILWAY DRIVE

Chinese Armies Reported Closing Around Advance Forces of New Thrust.

By The Associated Press

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's Chinese armies reported today they had closed in around Japanese advance forces which penetrated the towns of Peng-Chang and Changshu in a new drive aimed at capture of the Kiangsi-Hunan railway.

With the Chinese still clinging to a 25-mile sector on the Chekiang-Kiangsi, the Japanese were attempting to seize the Kiangsi-Hunan loop for a part of their projected rail trunk linking Shanghai and Singapore.

Fierce battles were reported raging around the two towns.

In the battle of Australia, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported that 16 Japanese bombers raided an Allied airdrome on Horn Island, in the Torres Strait between Australia and New Guinea, inflicting slight damage.

Otherwise, there was only "intermittent air reconnaissance," Gen. MacArthur reported, with allied fliers keeping constant vigil against any new massing of Japanese invasion armadas in the ring of islands above Australia.

Earthquake Reported; May Be in Aleutians

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 8—A "rather severe" earthquake in an undetermined direction 4,400 miles from New York was recorded early today on the seismograph at Fordham university.

Rev. Joseph Lynch, university seismologist, said the time of the first shock was 3:06:23 a. m. and that of a second 3:15:04 a. m.

He said that a circle, drawn with New York as the center and having a radius of 4,400 miles, cut through the Aleutian islands and that the quake might possibly have occurred there.

REST ROOMS TO GET ATTENTION

Commissioners Decide To Act But Say Contractors All Busy Now.

If action isn't forthcoming on the Marion County Academy of Medicine's recommendation May 21 for a clean-up of the courthouse rest rooms the blame will be on conditions which have tied up contractors.

That was the announcement at noon today after Prosecuting Attorney James E. Reed talked with the commissioners as to their voluntarily going ahead on the recommendation without waiting on an order from either the city or county health departments.

Monday the commissioners said they had done nothing on the recommendation because they had received no order from one of the health departments.

This morning when Mr. Reed talked with them he said they told him they had been working on a plan of correcting the situation but were having difficulty getting contractors to do the work.

Contractors Uncertain

The commissioners told the prosecutor, he said, that they have consulted contractors but can get no guarantee as to when they can do the work or when materials will be available.

Earlier this morning Mr. Reed said he would talk with the commissioners personally about remedying a condition brought to their attention by the academy on May 21.

TURKEY'S PREMIER STRICKEN SUDDENLY

Guided Nation Clear of War Through Trying Times.

By The Associated Press

ANKARA, Turkey, July 8—Premier Refik Saydam died early today following a heart attack. He was 61 years old and had been premier since January, 1939.

A semi-official announcement said Dr. Ahmet Fikri Tuzer, minister of interior, would serve as acting premier until a new appointment could be made.

Saydam had been premier of Turkey from before the outbreak of war and his policies kept Turkish soil inviolate while most of her close neighbors were drawn into the conflict.

Shortly after assuming office in January, 1939, Saydam stated his government's policy as maintaining "friendly relations with all powers, great and small."

At the same time he declared that Turkey's army was capable of warding off any danger of aggression.

He was one of the signers of the Turkish mutual assistance pact with France and Britain in October, 1939.

But Turkey, although regarding herself as a "non-belligerent ally" of Britain and France, did not enter the war when Italy declared war on the Allies. The premier explained that Turkey's entrance in the war at that time would have been suicidal as it would not be backed by Russia, the United States and the British Empire, which were [illegible]

BRITISH KEEP UP BLOWS AT FOE IN EGYPT

Stabs from Air and On Land Aimed To Wear Down Rommel's Forces.

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, July 8—Intensive British air blows and harrying patrol stabs against the Axis forces, both aimed at wearing down the enemy's power in the still undecided battle at the threshold of the Nile, were reported by the British today.

Still, however, there were no major attacks on either side and both forces evidently were stabbing to test out the opposition and saving their heavy punches for a decisive battle that might be joined at any time.

A British headquarters bulletin said that patrols operating near the coastal end of the line destroyed some axis tanks yesterday and took a few prisoners while the RAF again pounded Tobruk and started "violent explosions and fires" with direct hits on enemy machine gun nests and oil stores in the battle area.

Plane Losses Listed

Against three enemy planes down on the North African front and nine more over Malta, the British said they lost eight but that six of their pilots were saved.

Both desert armies were established firmly between the Mediterranean and Qattara depression in the El Alamein area, both closely concealing when or how they would try to break the stalemate.

In the past 48 hours the Germans have withdrawn from the southern end of their line, in effect turning a corner at the inland anchor and establishing a sidewall.

The British regarded this as a security measure against a flank attack but there was no indication whether it was because Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was organizing a new attempt to burst the bottleneck or because he had strength left only to hold on.

"Uneasiness" Reported

(Stockholm newspaper dispatches from Berlin indicated uneasiness in the Nazi capital over Rommel's position.)

(Heavy Axis attacks on Malta were taken by the British in London to mean that convoys were hurrying reinforcements. Evidence of the weight of enemy efforts to eliminate that British isle as a threat to Rommel's supply route was Malta's report last night that 24 raiders had been shot down there in 24 hours.)

Colorful Ceremony Marks City's Induction Service for State Guard Company

51 Men Become Members of Co. H. in Program at Stadium Witnessed by 4,000.

By HALLIE HOUCK

Marion has an Ohio State Guard unit today, Co. H of the Second Regiment, inducted in a beautiful mass ceremony last night at the Harding Stadium by Col. Wade Christy of Columbus, regiment commander, in the presence of approximately 4,000 persons.

The onlookers included Adjutant General Donald F. Pancoast and members of his staff from Columbus, Major John S. Sears, executive officer of the Scioto Ordnance Plant, and his staff, and city and county officials.

Perfect weather prevailed for the ceremony and when the pre-induction program started a slight breeze stirred the American flag flying from the tall pole at the north end of the sun-bathed field.

Gets Official Welcome

Colonel Christy in a brief address to the new State Guard Unit said:

"We welcome you into the ranks of the Ohio State Guard. We are proud to have you. You are one of the best we have mustered. We do not know what mission we may have but whatever it is an organization of this kind is going to carry it out.

"We are grateful to the people of Marion for turning out an organization such as this and presenting it to the state of Ohio. We are especially grateful to Mr. Hildebrandt, Dr. Sutherland and Mrs. Mason who have done so much to make it possible. You are in a military organization. I don't think anything is more important except being in the service itself. What training you get in the Guard is going to be beneficial to the country and to you."

The induction ceremony was as beautiful and impressive as any Marion has witnessed.

At either end of the field were the blue-clad State Guard units from Marysville, Delaware and London, facing each other. At the east side were lined up the hundreds of men and women air raid wardens and auxiliary police and in front of them were the Women's Ambulance Corps members. On either side were the colors of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars posts.

Full Company of 51

The Marion Rifles men who volunteered for State Guard duty, a company of 50, and the three officers, Capt. Carl Ebert, First Lieut. Elmer E. Smith and Second Lieut. Howard D. Price, were lined up in the center of the field.

As Colonel Christy read the roster, each man took one step forward and answered "Here." Only one man could not be present. When the roll call was completed, the men raised their right hands and repeated after Colonel Christy, giving their own names:

"I ... do solemnly swear that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Ohio against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I will pay true faith and allegiance to the same, that I will obey the orders of the governor of Ohio and the officers appointed over me and that I will serve them honestly and faithfully, so help me, God."

Company Roster

Following is the complete roster of Co. H:

In opening his administration, Mr. Tway gave a report of the recent Rotary International convention in Toronto, Canada, which he attended as delegate from the Marion club and also the Cardington club.

He gave quotations from the outstanding addresses of the convention and praised the Canadian Rotarians for their hospitality and the perfect arrangements made for entertainment of the thousands of visitors from all parts of the world. The convention theme, he said, was "Learning How To Live Together."

Installed with Mr. Tway were E. E. Holt as vice president, Earl N. Hale as secretary-treasurer, and Rev. Howard L. Olewiler, Earl J. Pierce, John K. Bartram, Dr. D. W. Brickley Jr., Adrian Busick and Karl W. Schell as board members.

S. E. Gerstner who came here recently from Springfield to become manager of Hotel Harding, was introduced as a new member of the club.

Mr. Gerstner succeeded Virgil Dye as manager of the hotel when Mr. Dye entered the army service recently. In the course of yesterday's meeting President Tway read a letter from Mr. Dye, also a Marion Rotarian, written from Patterson Field, Dayton, where he is stationed and is receiving army headquarters training.

are dirty and the thing to do is go ahead and clean them up," the prosecutor said. "I think it can be done without the necessity of any health board issuing an order."

Seen As Job For City

The prosecutor stated further that in his opinion, based on statutes covering health districts, the clean-up was the job of the city health department, not the county health department, if the matter should come to a showdown.

He said that Dr. N. Sifritt, county health commissioner, had consulted him some time ago as to health department jurisdiction in the courthouse, and he had advised Dr. Sifritt that the city health department had jurisdiction.

"The courthouse is not set apart as a reservation," he explained. "The city can go in the courthouse and arrest persons, serve warrants, and other functions. Just being on county property doesn't take the courthouse out of the jurisdiction of the city as far as the city health department goes."

Prosecutor Reed said the same applied to the county jail and most of the county-owned fairground property as far as city health department jurisdiction.

Question of Health

The county prosecutor's attitude this morning was that on the question of whether the county commissioners wait for an order to spend money on a job they will have to do eventually, or go ahead voluntarily and clean up the restrooms is a matter not only of health but good government.

Monday the county commissioners said they were waiting on an order from one of the health departments. County Health Commissioner N. Sifritt said he felt the job was for the city health department and the city health commissioner. Dr. M. M. Weinbaum, said he felt the matter of which health department did the job was up to the commissioners.

PROBLEM ADDED TO FARM FUND FIGHT

Senate Action on Parity Loans Is New Complication.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 8—Senate and house members, still far at odds on the $680,000,000 farm bill, today planned a series of conferences after reaching a temporary agreement to supply the department of agriculture with July funds.

A complicating factor, however, was the senate's action yesterday in approving full parity loans on six major farm crops—wheat, corn, cotton, rice, tobacco and peanuts.

Chairman Cannon of the house appropriations committee declared the loan bill, sponsored by Senators Russell (D-Ga) and Bankhead (D-Ala), would have "no effect" on the controversy, which Cannon said involved the principle of whether the government's parity program was going to be broken down.

Under present law, cooperators in the crop control program are able to obtain loans at 85 per cent of parity on the six major crops. Under a full parity loan program, they could borrow 15 cents a bushel more than the present market price on corn, and 38 cents a bushel more on wheat.

Senator Russell asserted the bill would "place a floor under farm products which will enable the farmer to exist in a world of cheap prices."

Majority Leader Barkley (Ky) of the senate told reporters, however, that only about 350,000,000 bushels of the expected 900,000,000 bushel wheat harvest would be raised by cooperators and thus subject to full loans. The remaining "free wheat" would have to find it down price level, Barkley said, and he predicted that any increase resulting from passage of the bill would be temporary.

Cannon forecast a presidential veto for the loan bill if it passed the house.

The measure went through the senate 28 to 24, after narrowly escaping return to committee by a vote of 26 to 27.

PREDICTS POSSIBLE TIRE CONFISCATION

May Become Necessary, Says President.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 8—America's 30 million motorists faced the prospect today of having their tires confiscated if the war gets worse.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference late yesterday that he was trying to save the nation, not gasoline and rubber, and warned that if the situation should deteriorate it might be necessary for the government to commandeer privately-owned tires.

He made it clear that he was hopeful such extreme action could be avoided. He reported that no decisions had yet been reached on nationwide gasoline rationing as a tire-saving measure and said he hoped the gasoline and rubber problems might be separated.

Although he announced improved scrap rubber collections, he said it already was apparent that scrap was not a cure-all.

Meanwhile the army, navy and petroleum coordinator's office appealed to east coast motorists to discontinue immediately all unnecessary use of gasoline. A joint statement said joyriding in the ration area was keeping war workers from getting enough fuel to get to work and back and was threatening to hamper seriously the war production program.

In a drive to keep the 5,000,000 motor trucks in the country in good operating condition, the office of defense transportation announced that truck owners who signed a pledge to follow its aids on maintenance would be permitted to display a red, white and blue insignia.

NAZI DRIVE

Vyazma, Bryansk, Orel (northern anchor of the Voronezh operations), Kuphansk, Slavyansk, Stalino and Taganrog.

* * *

BERLIN (FROM GERMAN BROADCASTS), July 8—The encirclement and capture of numerous Soviet troops northwest of Voronezh in enlarging a German salient in that general district and the surrounding of strong Russian forces on the Rzhev front west of Moscow were reported today by the German high command.

Russian counter-attacks northwest of Voronezh failed, but the Russians continued to attack to the northwest in the Orel sector after being repulsed in fierce fighting that brought strong German aerial forces into use, a communique said.

The general picture as described by the Nazis thus portrays the Germans as broadening the spearhead they have thrust from Kharkov and Kursk about 120 miles eastward to Voronezh and 300 miles south of Moscow, while the Russians are doggedly counter-attacking on the north and northwest flank in an effort to smash through and cut off the advanced German forces.

Where the Nazis claim to have encircled large Russian forces, is on the upper Volga river, and railway 130 miles west of Moscow on a front where the Nazis long have held a bulge during a comparatively quiet period.)

Analyst Warns War Complacency Is a Real Danger

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

As the Nazi Napoleon begins to move the weight of his great offensive felt, a lot of folks are beginning to take refuge in the remark that after all, the Allies can lose the Caucasus, the Middle East and Egypt and still win the war.

That's a terribly dangerous idea to be nursing. There is, of course, a modicum of truth in the assertion, but it represents the rankest kind of wishful thinking—and it's an invitation to complacency.

I'm not one of those of little faith who believe that the Allies are doomed to defeat in this vast theater which strategically is one of the most vital of the whole world war. Our peril is very great and we certainly shall lose this territory unless we make a mighty effort and fortune favors us. But we definitely have a chance to hold our ground as things now stand.

Should Hitler gain his objectives, however, the Allies would (barring perhaps one contingency) be faced with the grim alternatives of losing the war or of seeing it protracted for many long years, with no man able to foresee the end.

The contingency which would offer deviation from that black prospect would be the successful establishment of a powerful Allied front in Western Europe before Hitler was able to capitalize the vast resources and strategic advantages which he would have gained by his conquest. Such a front would have to be thrown into action quickly, because the Nazis would acquire strength fast after seizing the oil, minerals and foodstuffs.

While present indications are that the Allies aren't yet ready for a land invasion of Western Europe, still it strikes me that they might be impelled to jump to it suddenly if Hitler's present offensives, either against Egypt or against the Russians, should jeopardize the whole Middle Eastern set-up. In any event, one would expect the United States and Britain to inaugurate a terrific bombing offensive against German cities in an effort to force withdrawal of German strength from the Russian front.

This whole picture grows out of the premise that if Hitler can't break through to fresh resources he will be beaten. If he can reach those resources he can repair his war-machine, and his chances of winning the war will be good.

Should he gain his present objectives, he not only would acquire resources but he would cut the Allies off from them in that theater. Russia would be badly ham-strung if she lost her grain fields and oil wells in the Caucasus.

The Soviet would be pretty much in the present unhappy position of China—her home resources cut to the bone, and virtually isolated from the outside world. Even now Russia's main contact with her Allies is through the Arctic ports of Murmansk and Archangel and the Persian Gulf, and Persia would fall with the Middle East.

Nazi possession of the whole eastern Mediterranean and Middle East would, of course, bring the European Axis powers and Japan together. India would be open to invasion and the Axis front would be solid from the Pacific to the Atlantic. You can fill in the et ceteras for yourself.

Knudsen Declares Tool Production Not Enough

FLINT, Mich., July 8—"We are making the greatest number of machine tools any country in the world has ever made, and it's still not enough," Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen, former General Motors president, told Flint war manufacturers yesterday.

In Michigan on a trip of inspection to armament plants, Knudsen said "goods produced by us in the next 60 days will be more valuable than twice the amount produced next year."

"The job of production is only half done," he said. "The demands of every country are getting cheaper."

Distribution of materials remained one of the most critical problems, he admitted.

RED CROSS AIDS IN HOME FRONT PROBLEMS

Help Morale of Soldiers by Helping at Home.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., July 8—One of the most important jobs of the Red Cross is to help soldiers solve problems arising back home, an official of the national organization asserted today.

Roy Hershey, field supervisor for the American Red Cross military and naval welfare service, told a Red Cross wartime institute that a speedy solution of such problems is vital to morale in the services.

When possible, ways are found for soldiers to return home in times of emergency, Hershey explained, while efforts are made to settle unexpected financial problems developing after a man enters service.

Miss Mary E. DeLissey of the Red Cross nursing service staff asserted that the Red Cross wants at least one person in every family to take its home nursing course.

Possibility of Supreme United Nations Head Seen

Several Americans Mentioned for Position Although No Official Action Has Been Taken.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 8—Some high inter-allied personages here speculated today on the possibility that an American—perhaps Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States army—might some day become supreme commander of all United Nations land, air and sea forces throughout the world.

So far there is no official move toward creating a supreme commander. But it can be said that some important people who refuse to permit use of their names, either expect or hope for one.

Assuming the job went to an American—which both British and American sources here do assume—it might not necessarily go to Marshall. Other possibilities of course include Admiral William D. Leahy and General Douglas MacArthur.

Leahy, while 67, generally is considered one of President Roosevelt's closest military advisers.

Served as Ambassador

Since retiring as chief of naval operations a few years ago he has served as ambassador to the Vichy French government. Recently he left the White House with the statement that the President had "some kind of employment" for him.

General MacArthur might be a contender not only for his military skill but because of the worldwide acclaim that has grown out of his defense on Bataan.

In fact one of the reasons for having a supreme commander is the big supply of leadership talent. As one of the ranking inter-allied officials interviewed for this article put it:

"You might say the United Nations had a football team—Stalin and Chiang Kai-Shek at ends, MacArthur at center, Wavell at guard, Roosevelt at quarterback, Churchill at fullback, and similar stars all through the lineup. It might make sense to have a captain to promote teamwork."

At present United Nations strategy calls for area commands in different parts of the world—MacArthur in the Southwest Pacific, Wavell in India, Auchinleck in the Middle East, Chiang Kai-Shek in China. In Russia, there are only Russian forces, hence no inter-allied command. Now that Americans are in Great Britain, an appointment may be made there.

The fault, if any, with this set-up is illustrated by the current German threat to Egypt, in the opinion of another official who likewise declined use of his name.

Theoretic Strategy

Theoretically, the Nazi forces could have been annihilated long ago if British tanks sent to Russia and American troops sent to Australia had been dispatched instead to Libya.

Perhaps the routing of men and materials was the wisest possible in the circumstances, said this source but actually the destinations were chosen on the basis of day-to-day needs. He argued that in a global war, someone ought to be in charge of a master strategy plan for the whole world to see that such help went to places where it would fit the world picture.

Another reason advanced for a supreme commander was the asserted need of an agency of last resort to decide such questions as standardization of material types and similar issues which, because of democratic procedure, are debated sometimes for long periods without action.

This official said, "In a democracy, you've got to let everyone say his nickel's worth, but somebody has to make the decisions."

WORK RESUMED AFTER $10,000 AKRON FIRE

Assembling of Aircraft Parts Halted by Rubber Fire.

By The Associated Press

AKRON, O., July 8 — Assembling of aircraft parts proceeded today after a $10,000 fire destroyed much of the rubber sealing strip along the south door of Goodyear Aircraft Corp.'s mammoth air dock, former home of the dirigibles Akron and Macon.

An acetylene welding torch being used by workmen caused the fire late yesterday. Acting Fire Chief Frank Vernotzy said after he investigated the damage.

Flames from the torch ignited the rubber stripping at the bottom of the door, then climbed 211 feet to the top of the building, which has no inside supports. It is the largest building of its kind in the world.

Commander C. V. S. Knox, resident naval inspector, said it was likely machine tools used in making aircraft parts had been damaged by water. The city's entire fire fighting apparatus, auxiliary firemen, police and local civilian defense workers helped quench the flames.

ARMY NOW DEDUCTS FROM SOLDIERS' PAY

First Deductions for Dependents Ordered from June Pay.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 8 — The army already has started deducting from soldiers' pay checks the contributions they are required to make to dependent wives and children under the family allowance bill which became law on June 23, although payments to the dependents will not start until November.

First deductions were ordered from June pay checks due July 1. But since some army posts already had their June payrolls made up when instructions were received, deductions in those cases will not start until August 1. To prevent hardship the June deductions at those camps may be spread over three of four months.

Government cash benefits are being added to these pay allotments, but both will be allowed to accumulate into lump sums ($250 in the case of a dependent wife) before first payments are made on Nov. 1. The law specified payments to be effective as of June 1, but the delay in setting up administrative machinery will postpone initial payments for four months.

Thereafter the government checks will go out monthly.

Although formal application blanks will not be available until about July 25, Col. Thurston Hughes, of Louisville, Ky., head of a staff of 1,265 set up to administer the new law for the army, has ordered post commanders to accept informal applications to establish a date for making monthly deductions.

Since deductions and allowances may accrue from June 1, those in the service on that date started, or were due to start, contributing July 1. Those entering the service after June 1 will have deductions start from the day of the month following their application for benefits.

ADVICE TO MOTORISTS

Keep Record of Tax Stamp As Safeguard Against Loss.

Motorists are warned to keep a personal record of the serial number of their automobile tax stamps by Harold D. Sherrer, internal revenue collector, whose office is in the postoffice building.

In case a stamp is lost and the owner has a record of the serial number, it will be possible to have a new stamp issued. Otherwise no stamp can be issued to replace the lost one.

Replacement of a stamp may be obtained by filling out a certificate at Mr. Sherrer's office.

The Chilean air line carried more than twice as many passengers in the first 10 months last year as in all of 1941.

OVERSEAS AIR CHIEF

Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz (above), 51, of Boyertown, Pa., has been appointed commander-in-chief of the United States army air forces in the European theater of war, it was announced in London. In 1929 Major General Spaatz made aviation history as commander of the army endurance plane "Question Mark," which he piloted to its then record continuous flight of 150 hours, 40 minutes and 15 seconds, over Los Angeles. The red-haired commander is married and the father of three daughters.

RENTS

Marion fair rent committee has not met for about a month, pointing out that since it has no authority and not even any plan forms on which to record hearings, it has felt its work would be of little consequence. He said the committee also has anticipated appointment of a federal administrator here to enforce OPA regulations in line with federal plans to enforce the price ceiling program.

In commenting on the likelihood of rent administrators being named for various cities, the Columbus committee's clerk said that to date there has been no rent division set up in the state OPA office, and there has been no indication there as to how the rent problem generally will be handled.

One development today that may lead to early action on rent ceilings was the appointment of M. A. Pixley of Columbus as state OPA administrative officer. He will work with H. T. Beckman, state OPA director.

Ohio Farms Yield 95,000 Tons of Junk

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, July 8 — Ohio farms have yielded some 95,000 tons of junk iron for war purposes, Chairman Elmer F. Kruse of the state's U. S. department of agriculture war board reported today. Clark county leads the drive with contributions totaling 4,814 tons.

"Junk metal, as well as junk rubber, is one of the most important crops that can be harvested during this war," remarked Kruse, observing that more of the metal remains in barns and fields.

CONFERENCE WITH KING

LONDON, July 8—Major Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of the United States army in the European theater, had an audience with King George at Buckingham palace today. It was announced only that it lasted "for some time."

ARGENTINA ORDERS SHIPS TO AVOID U. S. COAST

Follows Announcement That Sinking Is Closed Incident.

By The Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, July 8—Argentina, while still insisting on her right to freedom of the seas, has ordered all Argentine merchant vessels to avoid the east coast of the United States which Germany has declared a blockade zone, a high official soruce said last night.

In the future, Argentine ships will dock instead only at United States ports in the Gulf of Mexico. This action was taken after Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu announced that Germany's sinking of the Argentine ship Rio Tercero off New York was a closed incident.

Argentina, which still maintains diplomatic relations with the Axis, had protested the sinking—the third attack on Argentine ships—and received a promise of reparations from the German government.

An Argentine authority explaining the decision to avoid east coast ports of the United States said:

"This action does not signify acceptance of the blockade announced by Germany, but is taken merely as a measure of precaution."

OPA Rules Retailers Cannot Sell New Line

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 9 — A seller of summer seasonal clothes for men and boys may not introduce new lines selling for prices higher than he has been charging for his highest priced merchandise, Price Administrator Leon Henderson has ruled.

This "freezing" of price lines was designed, OPA said, to head off any tendency of manufacturers and merchants to concentrate on high priced apparel.

Public Favors Punishment for Gasoline Bootlegging If Rationing Is Decreed

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., July 8—With nationwide gasoline rationing a certainty, one problem that will raise its ugly head is the problem of bootlegging and illicit sales.

In rationed areas it is already a problem. A substantial number of persons interviewed by the Institute this week throughout the rationed states claim they have personal knowledge of violations of ration rules by service stations or garages.

The public in those areas is overwhelmingly in favor of punishment for violations, but believes it should be in the form of fines or suspended jail sentences, and not jail sentences.

The issue was put from persons in the service stations in the rationed states were first asked: "Without giving any names, have you heard of any cases where service stations or garages have sold gasoline to customers without requiring the full amount on ration cards?"

The results are:

Yes, have knowledge of violations	43%
No, have no knowledge of them	57

Respondents were next asked:

"Do you think there should be any punishment of service station operators or garages who disobey gasoline ration rules?"

The vote shows a majority of better than 3 to 1 in favor of punishment.

Yes	69%
No	17
Undecided	14

Finally, those who think there should be punishment, were asked what they thought the punishment should be.

Replies of the 69 per cent who believe in punishment fall into the following categories:

They should lose selling privilges, have their licenses revoked	25%
They should be fined	25
Should have jail sentences	3
Should be let off with a warning	1
Operators should be fired	1
No opinion as to what punishment should be	13
	69%

While gasoline is still plentiful outside the rationed states, nevertheless nation-wide rationing is proposed mainly to make the present automobile tires last longer.

The gravity of the situation was well illustrated in a survey by the Institute last month which showed that more than half of the nation's 20,000,000 car-owning families have tires that will last only one year or less at the present rate of driving.

More than 4,000,000 of these say they can only go for another six months unless they are able to make drastic reductions in their driving.

MISSIONS INCREASE DESPITE WORLD WAR

Catholic Students' Group Issues Statement in Directory

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, July 8 — The Catholic Students' Mission Crusade reported today that despite the harassments of war, the number of missionaries in foreign fields had increased more than 10 per cent in the last two years.

Footnoting the issuance of its biennial directory of "missionary index of Catholic Americans" engaged at home and abroad, the Crusade observed that the increase was "proof of a healthy religious spirit" in the United States.

There are approximately 2,700 Catholic American missionaries in foreign service. The home missionary roster showed roughly 2,000 names, a gain of 375 or more than 17 per cent over that in 1940.

Comparatively few foreign missionaries have been recalled from assignments because of war conditions, the index noted.

TOO YOUNG TO ENLIST

Youthful Patriot Advocates Insecticide for Japs.

NEW YORK, July 8 — Michael Warren, a young man wearing trench helmet labelled "Fighting Squadron" and carrying an overnight bag, stepped up to the traffic officer at 46th street and Park avenue and saluted smartly.

"Where do I go to join the navy?" the volunteer asked.

Patrolman Louis Fishkin saluted back.

"Come with me—I think I'll join the navy myself," the policeman said and they marched off to the nearest police station. There police opened the bag and found a toy wooden cannon and an insecticide sprayer.

"I'm going to murder those Japs," Michael insisted. "I spent my whole 25 cents for that poison."

A desk sergeant telephoned Mrs. Warren and Michael, aged 7, was hurried off home complete with his arsenal which he can put to use on Japanese beetles.

Aged Toledoan Released by Kenton Officials

Special to The Star

KENTON, O., July 8—An aged Toledoan, described by Sheriff Randall Clark as a gypsy, restored the $93 that was stolen June 30th from Edward Brown, 77, farmer of near Hepburn, but was not held for the crime when three persons testified he was not involved. An automobile registered in his name was identified as the one used in an attempted robbery at the W. Womack home, Mt. Victory, and in an attack on Mr. Brown who was thrown to the ground and $93 removed from his clothes. The man and two women using the car have not been located.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Equipment in clothing for our American flyers costs about $200 for every aviator, so it takes a lot of money for our rapidly increasing air force. This clothing is especially manufactured of horse-hide jackets and trousers, fleece lined.

The kit also includes a "B-70" which is a complete jacket and trousers zipper suit, also made of horse-hide and is fleece lined. Two pairs of shoes, helmet, goggles and other lesser equipment complete the ensemble. Your purchases of War Bonds, at least ten percent of your income every pay day, will help buy these outfits for our flyers everywhere, for our Army and Navy needs thousands of them.

"Spider Ranch" In Knox Co. Helps in U. S. War Effort

At Fredericktown, in nearby Knox county, just east of the Morrow county line, a "spider ranch" is being operated to produce vital silk for bomb sights, gun sights, telescopes and microscopes for the U. S. armed forces.

An article about this unusual ranch is published in the current issue of "Flying," aviation magazine.

"An adequate supply of spider silk is assured the United States through the development of a 'spider ranch' at Fredericktown, O.," the magazine article states. "There, harnessed in a contraption which prevents them from snipping the silk with their hind legs, more than 200 spiders of the Golden Garden Miranda Aurentia breed are in production for Uncle Sam's war program.

"Prof. John G. Albright of the Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, O., and his brother operate the spider ranch. They explain that extracting the silk is similar to milking a cow. The silk, as it emerges from the spider's pouch, is wound on reels, about 100 feet to a reel. The operators of this unique but necessary 'factory' charge $9 a reel for their product.

"Cocoon silk, human hair or man-made substitutes have been found unsatisfactory for the minute and delicate part played in our war program by the product of the spider whose fragile web has been harnessed to our war production."

BUCYRUS COUNCIL CONDUCTS SESSION

Acts on Availability of Funds for Street Program.

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, July 8—Widening and resurfacing of Mansfield street from the underpass to the West Mansfield street bridge came a step closer to realization Tuesday night when Bucyrus city council authorized the finance committee to determine if funds are available for the city's share of the expenses and to report at the next meeting.

County commissioners have agreed to furnish $1,000 of the $8,000 set aside as the city's share of the expense, Mayor William F. Whitesmire advised council. Of the remaining $7,000, at least half can be financed from the gasoline tax revenue, Auditor E. C. Oppenlander stated.

Pressed by a representative from the International Union of operating engineers, council recommended that the seven positions in the city water department be placed under civil service. Their recommendation came after an executive session with the labor representative, Henry Wilhelm, from the Columbus offices, who stated during open council session that he "would not be responsible for what happens at the water works if the men were not given civil service jobs." The recommendation for making the positions civil service jobs must now be passed upon by the civil service commission before becoming final.

In a financial report on Ammiller park, chairman Carl Light reported that receipts to date had totalled $2,381.55.

Public hearing on the 1943 budget was scheduled for the next meeting night, July 21.

Actor and Wife Visit in Upper Sandusky

UPPER SANDUSKY, July 8—Art Davis, 29, the western movie star from Texas and Hollywood, now on a tour of the movie theaters of the nation in a war bond sale promotion program, and his new bride, the former Shirley Parfait, 21, Powers model from New York, left Upper Sandusky Tuesday afternoon enroute to Tulsa, Okla., where Mr. Davis is scheduled to appear at a bond sale rally.

Leaving on time was more than they were able to manage at Columbus where they had planned to be married at noon Monday, and then start for Upper Sandusky.

They met Mayor Floyd Green in his office at noon all right, only to learn that Ohio requires blood tests before the ceremony. An afternoon of hurried arrangements finally brought them back to Mayor Green with all credentials in order at 6 o'clock, leaving them only just time enough to drive here for the evening show.

Desert Water Left Unpalatable by British

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, July 8—Fishy water, so unpalatable that no stomach can stand it, was all that the British left behind for the Germans to drink on the western desert.

This was the result of fish oil methodically poured into the wells at all oases.

Although German engineers no doubt have cleaned the wells by now and made the water drinkable, it will keep its lingering taste of fish for months.

Because water sources on the desert, although scarce are virtually indestructible, this method has supplanted former efforts to blow up the wells. Where a well is blasted the enemy can get palatable water within 24 hours by digging a new one nearby.

COLUMBUS BEER PRICES BACK AT CEILING LEVEL

Dealers Act Voluntarily As OPA Officials Start Inquiry.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., July 8—Columbus beer dealers have agreed to reduce their prices on bottled beer to 10 cents a bottle, the price received last March, James W. Huffman, chief attorney for the Ohio office of price administration, reported today.

The agreement, first since the Ohio OPA office was established, followed an investigation which disclosed a number of beer dealers had increased prices to 15 cents a bottle, or two for 25 cents.

"We hope that other dealers throughout the state will follow the example set by the Columbus group that reduced prices to conform to regulations," Huffman said. "Compliance with the ceiling will eliminate complaints and the necessity for subsequent investigations by OPA. The ceiling on products covered by the regulation will be enforced. Voluntary compliance will save time and trouble for the dealers and OPA," he explained.

Huffman emphasized that all bottled goods such as beer, soft drinks and milk are covered by the general maximum price regulation and can not be sold at prices higher than the maximum price charged in March 1942.

GALION, July —The Bucyrus Gun club grounds will be scene of the Crawford county corn hunters' annual trap shoot when the meeting is held July 19. This annual event may be the last such competition for the duration, R. W. Stall, president of the association, announced.

The drawings of 15 awards for restocking will also be held at this time and prizes will be awarded. The committee in charge of the contest is being assisted by the state conservation department and Fred Ernst, conservation officer, in an effort to keep Crawford county stocked with fish and game. In 1941, through their efforts, 300 rabbits, 950 pheasants and over 150 coons were released in the county.

Great Risks for Great Gains

THE far-ranging mechanized thrusts into Egypt and Russia east of the Don river recall events of a little more than two years ago when Germany was demonstrating the possibilities of mechanized warfare in France.

Observers then reached the same conclusion they are reaching now—that German tacticians were taking great risks for great gains. Nazi troops advanced too rapidly to protect their flanks and rear. An alert enemy, comparably equipped, should be able to close in from the sides almost at will.

That is exactly what the Russians did last summer. Their generals let the advancing Germans drive their salients, then pinched them off. They forced Hitler to order a change in Russian front tactics, something like the massed attacks that characterized land warfare in World war I. But now there are new reports of mechanized thrusts on that front only slightly less bold than the thrust that carried Gen. Rommel's army into Egypt.

This time, though, there is a difference. The enemy is comparably equipped. The British in Egypt still have power in the air. The Russians, with a year's experience behind them, have no particular reason to be afraid of the Germans any more; they are completely familiar with their tactics and have seen them at their worst as well as at their best. It still hasn't been proved that against an enemy capable of fighting back the tactics of far-ranging mechanized thrusts unsupported by masses of troops can be less than suicidal.

Saddest Part of the Record

WHEN the weather is good enough, United States aviators drop bombs on the Japanese clinging to their footholds in the Aleutians. The Aleutians, according to everybody but the Japanese, were too foggy to be of use, but now they are being used by Japan to threaten the security of North America. At least they're useful enough to make them dangerous in Japanese hands.

The Japanese confounded everybody but themselves by attacking Pearl Harbor with planes and going overland through Malaya to attack Singapore. The United States and Great Britain said it couldn't be done that way, but the Japanese did it. The British also said the Germans couldn't conduct an offensive in Libya during the hot season, but the Germans did it. The French said the Germans couldn't break the Maginot line, but the Germans did it.

Saddest part of the record in the war is the way the aggressors have been permitted time after time to win the advantage by the preconceived ideas of their victims. There has been no more flagrant series of wishful thinking in history—wishful thinking and defeatism. It has been literally true that the Axis is where it is today because it has done the things that "couldn't be done."

On the other hand, the United Nations are still cursed with their own conviction that there is nothing to be gained by flying in the face of orthodoxy. Whatever the strategists may be thinking, the British retreat in Libya scarcely had begun when quasi-experts of all degrees were positive there could be no United Nations offensive this summer. One counter-attack in Libya that turned out badly for their side was more than enough to drive them to cover.

Flying Freights

PROBABLY the most amazing change wrought by the war—a change that is not potential but already actual—is the sudden practicability of long distance flying. The groundwork had been completed before war began, but the development lagged because of lack of capitalization. The lack has been overcome by the vast sums of money released for war effort.

The war department's announcement of a worldwide system to carry personnel, supplies and mail to any part of the globe where the army may be operating is one more step toward a post-war organization of aerial transportation that will rival the merchant marine services. There will be, there already are, flying freights and passenger trains operating on inter-continental schedules.

The constant exchange of officials between the United States and Great Britain by airplane already is commonplace. Air freighters are the best hope of relieving Japan's blockade of China. They can become the link between North and South America. The Pacific clippers long ago demonstrated the possibilities in that area of incredible distances.

When peace comes and the war planes become junk, it will be more than convenience that will dictate conversion to commercial uses. Production capacity will have to be employed as a measure of economic necessity. It is as silly in 1942 to wonder whether the airplane will take the place of ships as it was in 1912 to wonder whether the automobile was going to supplant the horse.

News Behind the News

Supply Lines Present Major Problems for Both Sides in Battle of Egypt.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The main point behind recent fighting in Egypt is that both the British and Axis are making distinct preparations for supplies.

Just who is in the state of temporary exhaustion, Gen. Rommel or Gen. Auchinleck, is a pretty fair contest on the face of it. It is not up to yesterday if it was ever said to reach Cairo. Auchinleck was stopped at Mersa where the supplies were several hundred less than in Egypt.

Since the Mediterranean has become virtually a no man's sea, so far as the British are concerned, General Auchinleck's recently advanced reinforcements certainly had to come from other directions, nearby Syria, our own air base in Eritrea, and even India.

The German line is ten times shorter, but the British have superiority in the air. Their bombers, you may have noticed, have been hitting Benghazi day and night since their trouble started.

Thus, the fighting on both sides has been hindered to a substantial extent by the invisible factors behind the lines. The Germans, however, still hold a substantial advantage in this critical aspect of the campaign, because the British have been pushed back from their advance air bases.

Nazi-Red Football

Emphatic interpretations of the news from the Russian front have never been possible. The Nazis and the Reds are engaged there in tactics comparable to American football.

The latest Nazi hammering of the line between Kursk and Kharkov, several hundred miles north of where the real play was expected, has had many puzzling aspects, but seems subject to only one interpretation. The Nazis apparently have been hammering the tackle and guard positions there in preparation for a run around the end where the play was expected in the first place.

The line north of Kharkov was not as strongly defended by the Reds as their position around Rostov. The Germans therefore were able to hit it hard enough to break through and in fact, cause some withdrawal of troops from the southern front. Also these tactics served to protect them in the future from any northern flanking move, if they go forward with the Rostov drive, as expected.

Consequently, both this unexpected northern break through, and the expected capture of Sevastopol apparently were only like preparations for a bigger drive to come in between these two points. At least that is the only interpretation which squares with the known facts, future events will tell.

Russian Policy

The Russians lately have permitted our army observers to get up a little nearer to the front lines than formerly, but mostly in quiet sectors. No special military missions have been allowed to come in. Only our men on the secure base have been allowed to go forward.

The Russians believe in running the war their own way. No Moscow interest in opening up a Siberian front has been reported here.

No Joint Returns

The house tax-makers already have changed their minds about one thing—joint taxation of husband and wife. The committee scrapped that treasury provision out of the tax bill after first adopting it, supposedly due to the ardent workings of Speaker Rayburn who hails from Texas, a community property state. There has also been some talk in committee that the White House intervened, but this has in no wise been substantiated.

Norris Hesitates

The grand old liberal of the senate, George Norris of Nebraska, decided several months ago he would not run for re-election, but he has since been told by President Roosevelt that it is "just as honorable for him to die in the senate as on the battlefield."

Not only from this but from other evidence, the politicos assume Norris will probably announce as an independent after the Aug. 11 primary. He did that before.

This time the President's entreaty might be strengthened by the fact that the favorite in the Democratic primary race is Representative Harry Coffee who has not been strictly a New Dealer.

The Argentine Situation

Ortiz Resignation No Help to Axis.

By JOHN GROVER

PARADOXICAL as it seems, the resignation of President Roberto Ortiz of Argentina, good friend of the U. S., is taken by most informed students of Latin America to mean that the United States is consistently out-maneuvering the axis in the contest for Argentine cooperation.

Ortiz, in his farewell statement, said he did not resign two years ago when his physical condition became serious, simply because he wished to lend his influence to the fight against the axis threat in Argentina. By inference, his resignation says that the threat is ended and he can safely retire to nurse his failing health.

Many factors have contributed to the improvement in U. S.-Argentine relations. There are strong indications that the powerful conservative, isolationist bloc headed by Acting President Ramon S. Castillo is ready to climb on the bandwagon of the democracies. Certainly the "prudent neutrality" policy that was accounted an Axis diplomatic victory is in for an overhauling.

Exchange Revision

Recently Argentina relaxed the exchange restrictions that halved U. S. exports before the war. The chamber of deputies, lower house of the Argentine congress, within the past fortnight has soundly belabored the Axis in demanding explanations of policy from Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu and Minister of Interior Miguel Culaciati.

The Axis has been briskly trying to cut its own throat in Argentina, with marked success. The stupid sinking of several Argentine merchantmen aroused a fierce storm of anti-Axis sentiment, which continues to grow.

Even the conservative bloc in the chamber of deputies deserted Castillo after the sinkings to vote the demand for explanations from the "prudent neutral" cabinet members.

There is strong evidence that Castillo has been forced to take cognizance of the welling anti-Axis tide. The notes to Germany concerning the ship losses have been ultimatum-sharp. A press "gag" rule issued under the state of siege proclaimed many months ago by Castillo was hastily revised and called "an error."

Castillo's previous "state of seige" throttling of the press largely benefited the Axis. "El Pampero," the Nazi newspaper, was curbed but little, while pro-allied papers were rigidly held to innocuous discussions.

Not So Comfortable

Castillo's "prudent neutrality," with an Axis bias, seemed like good common sense when spectacular Axis victories promised an early end to the war. With the whole picture changed by the entry of the U. S. into the war, the position of the Argentine conservatives has been increasingly uncomfortable.

The U. S. has been buying heavily of Argentine produce, at a time when other Argentine markets were shot to pieces. Another powerful factor arguing for closer cooperation with the U. S. is growing uneasiness over the way Brazil is capitalizing on U. S. aid to consolidate its position in South America.

Argentina has been the No. 1 power in South America proper, but American aid gratefully given to Brazil for Brazil's outstanding contributions to hemisphere solidarity is pushing that nation rapidly forward. Argentina now knows that she missed the brass ring. There is a growing element in Argentine ruling circles that would retrieve as much as possible by abandoning prudent neutrality and plumping for hemisphere solidarity.

Many Washington experts familiar with the Argentine picture profess to see the influence of Gen. Augustin P. Justo, former president and behind-the-scenes boss, in the veering of Argentina away from the Axis. Justo is a hard-headed realist, who engineered the coalition ticket that put both Ortiz and Castillo in office.

If Justo has decided that Argentina's advantage lies in joining the democracies and giving the hot-foot to the Axis, it is a notable gain in the war of diplomacy. All in all, everything points to the fact that Argentina is proceeding, with caution but steadily, to take an anti-Axis stand with her sister nations of this hemisphere.

Today and Tomorrow

Free Peoples Urged Not To Berate Leaders in Heat of Major Battles.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

MR. CHURCHILL spoke the literal truth when he said that the debate in parliament last week was an example of freedom which no other country would use or dare to use in times of mortal peril such as those through which we are passing. Given the steady political discipline of the British people, and the fact that when an issue is raised it can be met and disposed of quickly by a vote in the house, there is perhaps a net advantage from what happened.

But we must not underestimate the price which has to be paid for so lavish a use of the privileges of freedom. The Prime Minister had flown to Washington, had participated in laborious and intense discussions, had received the hard blow of unexpected bad news, had made the tiring flight back to England, and then at one and the same time was forced to face the crisis of the battle of Egypt and the threat to the authority of his own government. One wonders whether Sir John Wardlaw Milne and his associates who prepared this ordeal are without the imagination to realize the human realities of this drama, whether for example, they ever stopped to think that the time and energy Mr. Churchill and his government had to devote to the debate was that much time and thought and strength lost to the reinforcement of General Auchinleck.

Bad Time for Debate

Behind this debate there are undoubtedly issues of considerable importance which must be examined and dealt with. In Britain, as in Washington, there is much ground for improvement in the relations of Mr. Churchill as minister of defense, of Mr. Roosevelt as commander in chief, with the armed services. But in the crisis of a momentous battle the problem is how to do the very best that is possible with what you have: not to waste energy thinking how much better you would be doing if things were different. General Auchinleck's task is to fight General Rommel with the forces and the weapons that he has, and with those that Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt can send to reinforce him.

While he fights, General Auchinleck must be able to think only of Rommel, and that means that he must have the unqualified assurance of the support of all the United Nations. And if he is to have their support, so that he may fight with both hands and not with one hand tied behind his back, he must not have to give a thought to wondering whether Mr. Churchill will still be prime minister the next morning.

In the struggle of the grandeur and magnitude of that which is now being fought, it is fatally wrong to disperse the nervous energy of our leaders and commanders. A battle calls for an inhuman effort of concentrated energy, and the democracies show their want of understanding of the nature of war when they allow themselves the luxury of forcing their leaders to scatter their attention.

The time for criticism is in the lull between battles. For then, criticism, if it is well directed, can apply the lessons learned from past mistakes. But during the battle itself we stand or fall with the leaders we have: it is impossible to change horses when crossing the stream, or to put a new bridle on the horse, or even to wonder whether the horse is a bit of a mule.

Every Man's Duty

If our leaders are to do the best they can with what they have, the civilians at home can help them best to do it by practicing self-reliance and thus relieving the war leaders of unnecessary burdens. We ought, for example, to see to it that during the supremely critical months to come, the President and his chief advisors are not bothered by our civilian problems. The people, the congress, the press, the officials directly responsible could do most for the Battle of Egypt and the Battle of Russia and the Battle of Atlantic and the Battle of the Pacific by making it unnecessary for the commander in chief to worry about rubber and gasoline and taxes and farm prices and wages.

These are civilian problems which we ought to have enough gumption and common sense to work out for ourselves. And we ought to do it as a means of relieving men burdened with the awful responsibility of conducting the war.

In a free country the government must have the consent of the people and must, therefore, keep them informed. But the people have a reciprocal duty which is to use their imaginations to realize the burdens of their leaders, to imagine themselves in the place of their leaders and thus to understand how heavy are those burdens upon the body, the nerves and the spirit. For we are not the audience of this momentous drama, able to sit in our seats and applaud or boo the actors. We are the actors too, called upon each of us to carry what we can of the weight of responsibility.

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Friday, July 8, 1932.

Damage from a violent wind, rain and hail storm that swept over Marion county and surrounding territory Thursday was estimated high in the thousands of dollars.

The ambition of James Mattern and Bennett Griffin to set a new speed record for flight around the world was wrecked when their airplane came down in a peat bog half way between Berlin and Moscow. They had been reported as missing since the previous day.

It was announced that the Marion Junior Chamber of Commerce would go before city council the following Monday night with two proposals to rid the downtown business district of rubbish and handbills.

Mrs. Minnie Strine Klingle, 57, died at her home two miles east of Marion.

A delegation of "bonus marchers" was prevented from holding a parade on Marion's downtown streets when they were unable to produce a permit from the police department. The group was composed of about 16 men from Des Moines, Ia., on their way toward Washington. They had camped in the vicinity of the packing plant on West Center street the preceding night.

Marion postoffice receipts for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1932, amounted to $125,462 or $35,745 less than those of the preceding year. A general business decline was given as the chief cause.

Miss Zelma Swindler was hostess to the LeMinuet Salon club at Ringer's Inn.

Miss Florence Beckel of southeast of Marion was hostess at a 6 o'clock dinner honoring Miss Frances Linstedt, a student nurse at Grant Hospital, Columbus.

Mrs. Elmer Smith and Mrs. Catherine Tuttle were chosen delegates to the state Legion auxiliary convention in Toledo at a meeting of the Marion auxiliary chapter. Mrs. L. M. Eikenbary and Mrs. J. A. Morrison were named alternates.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Saturday, July 8, 1922.

The strike of railway shop men throughout the country entered its second week with no definite move toward a settlement.

J. W. Jacoby, chairman of the general centennial committee, received a letter from descendants of Eber Baker, founder of Marion, thanking the entire committee for the courtesies extended them during the centennial week. The communication was signed by Harriett C. Runyan, stepdaughter of Eber Baker, Maryanna Baker Allen, Mary Baker Day and Charles Eber Baker, grandchildren of Eber Baker.

Mrs. James Stevens and Mrs. Jane Randolph were hostesses to the Royal circle at the home of Mrs. Stevens on Cheney avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Byron Hume and Mr. and Mrs. Rodney B. Hume and children left on a motor trip to Jamestown, N. Y., where they were to visit relatives.

Misses Mary Kathryn Ryan of Silver street and Opal Vershae of Detroit went to Chicago to attend Chicago university.

Les Copeland

We Salute One of the Really Great Artists of Our Times—Though You Wouldn't Know Him.

By DAMON RUNYON

LES COPELAND, who died in San Francisco not long ago, was a pioneer in a form of American public entertainment once familiar and highly popular in the big cities of the land.

He played piano and sang songs, many of them of his own composition. He always worked alone and generally in small cafes. He sometimes referred to his operation as that of "barroom entertainer." He was one of the greatest single-handed entertainers of his type that ever lived.

He was the first white man of my knowledge who used that sort of rolling technique on the piano which was originated by colored piano players. I am not very good at describing music in any terms but the first time I heard what is called "boogie-woogie" a couple of years ago as produced by a pair of colored pianists, I immediately recognize Les Copeland's old style.

"He had a mean left hand," remarked Monte Brice, songwriter and scenarist, musing on Copeland's playing the other day.

Les once worked in Jim Sheedy's cafe on the east side of 7th avenue in New York, between 47th and 48th streets. He was giving out with his own "Rocky Mountain Rag" in those days with that same "boogie-woogie" technique. He also used to sing "My Landlady" and "Noah's Ark," which I believe he also wrote.

He came from Fort Worth, Tex., and must have been around 60 years of age when he succumbed to a heart attack. He was working in a cafe in San Francisco and Brice saw him not long before he died.

JACK NORWORTH, actor and author of many of our most famous songs, who is out here working on a picture based on the life of his former wife, Nora Bayes, said of Les, "He sang a good five-dollar song.

This is high praise in the vernacular. Jack added that he thought Les had one of the most soothing voices he ever heard, and I think soothing is just the word. I could sit all night and listen to Les.

His form was afterward elaborated by various individuals into a high society type of entertaining, a school of suave, dapper, accented gentlemen presenting themselves in swanky establishments with risque chants and ditties that charmed the swells. They specialized in "patter," or a running fire of gab, as something new in cafe entertainment, though Felix Adler introduced the same thing in Chicago cafes upward of 30 years ago.

Les played to the mob, but he was a regular social lion for a spell. That was when he succeeded the great Tommy Lyman and Lyman's accompanist, Roy Barton, in Nell Henry's New York bar in Paris. Les became in great demand as an entertainer at private parties. Bill Hallman, the actor, who was around with Les at the time, recalls that he got as high as $500 a night.

I THINK he did some stage work, though that was not his forte. He was at his best in a small room before an appreciative audience, even though the audience might be few in numbers. I remember Irving Berlin, who in his youth was an entertainer on Copeland's order in a New York Chinatown cafe, listening to Les with rapt attention for hours in Paris.

Less wrote some songs for Bert Williams, the greatest of all Negro entertainers of his day, but the titles escape me. They were in ragtime, which was perhaps Les' best hold. But he could also make you bust out crying with a torch song, especially if you had a smoldering ember of your own in your system. His stage usually lacked the tinsel and lights of a proper presentation of artistic effort, but you take it from me that in his way Les Copeland was a great artist.

Objects to Co-Eds' "Acting"

By The Associated Press

BOWLING GREEN, O.—American co-eds would be wonderful if they weren't "always trying to act," says R. Fernando Alegria, graduate student from Santiago, Chile.

"They should be themselves instead of trying to impress—I don't know whom," the 24-year-old South American explained.

Alegria objects to "the uniformity with which college girls dress." He prefers no make-up.

And the college boys?

"They're just swell!"

A delegate in 1938 to the second World Youth Conference for Peace, Alegria returned to the United States two years ago after graduation from the University of Chile.

Since obtaining a master's degree at Bowling Green State university last August he has been at the University of California in Berkeley on a teaching fellowship.

He is back at Bowling Green this summer to write fiction and literary criticism and hopes to popularize Spanish-American literature in this country.

"Every country in South America is with the Allies, including Argentina and Chile," he asserted.

He expressed the belief that Chile was helping the Allies by remaining "neutral."

Fossils at Cincinnati

By International News Service

CINCINNATI, O.—No longer is it necessary for geologists interested in studying the world famous Cincinnatian or Ordovician fossils to travel to museums in Washington, New York and other points to view representative collections.

The University of Cincinnati, thanks to the work of university geologists and students during the last 40 years, now has a representative collection of these palaeontological wonders in its museum.

The Cincinnati area for more than a century has been known as one of the world's richest deposits of fossil life of hundreds of millions of years ago, deposited when this portion of the midwest was under the waters of a shallow sea. Collectors sent their finds to other research centers, however, and Cincinnati never had a representative collection until now.

AIR CHIEF PRAISES AIRACOBRA PLANES

Commends Bell Aircraft Employes on Ship Quality.

By The Associated Press

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 8—Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, army air force chief, told Bell Aircraft Corporation employes today the P-39 Airacobra fighter planes they make are as tough as our American boys who fly them."

In a telegram General Arnold said:

"General MacArthur reports Captain Signal G. Brown attacked seven Jap Zero fighters and destroyed in his P-39. As he closed in on them, the leading Zero's left wing smashed the tail of Zero. The Jap plane went out of control and crashed but the P-39 was only scratched.

"Keep on making planes like that and fliers will show the world what Uncle Sam means when he says 'We'll fight!'"

Youngstown Leads in Scrap Rubber Drive

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 7—Youngstown and surrounding Ohio city areas in Mahoning county led in per capita collected and placed in the petroleum industry's warehouses, the Cuyahoga county petroleum industry rubber committee announced.

The committee's figures showed, however, that the average amount of rubber contributed per person in the Youngstown area was 5.6 pounds. Akron 4.7, Toledo 4.1, Cincinnati 3.3, Cleveland 2.3, and Columbus 2.3.

Officials said the figures were not complete because large quantities of rubber were to be collected from filling stations, and city areas were not strictly defined on a per person basis.

Erie Railroad Aids Scrap Metal Drive

Big electric magnet picks up scrap metal at Erie's Meadville reclamation plant to drop it into waiting cars for quick transfer to defense mills nearby. This scrap comes from abandoned Erie equipment and obsolete and worn out rolling stock and machinery. One month's Erie scrap will keep a big open hearth furnace going for 19 days.

Alligator shears cutting condemned side sheets into small squares for the defense scrap pile. Note car of small scrap nearby. Since 1927, 346,943 tons of iron and steel have been handled.

• • •

Since Pearl Harbor the collection of vital military scrap metal has been stepped up by the Erie railroad from 1,900 tons a month to 2,288 tons, enough to keep a large open hearth furnace busy for 19 full days each month, the Erie Magazine reports.

This great tonnage of scrap is collected from every point along the railroad and sent to reclamation centers at Meadville, Jersey City, Marion, Hornell and other points for processing.

Since the establishment in 1927 of Erie's main scrap and reclamation plant at Meadville, 346,943 tons of iron and steel have been handled there. This does not include dismantling of 28,033 cars, mostly freight and passenger, and 295 locomotives. The Meadville plant handles about 1,900 inbound cars of scrap each year. This is sorted into 21 classifications to meet requirements of the trade. Wheel centers, trucks, center sills, steel car sides, bridge girders, frogs, switches, etc., are reduced to marketable size by alligator shears or acetylene torch. Worn steel locomotive tires are torch-cut half way through at four equidistant points, then picked up by magnet and dropped onto a steel block for breaking. This same 8,000-pound electric magnet loads cars in quick order.

Where parts can be used again they are carefully sorted and stored.

War and the hungry mouths of the steel furnaces have added impetus to Erie's scrap collecting so that now the great cars of grief daily roll out of Meadville and other points on their way to the Youngstown area, with the final destination of their contents one more military secret.

"...His name is Fenner. He's a private detective."

"Oh, no." Della's eyes got round and startled. "Not a detective."

"Yes, a detective," Joyce said. "He's worked with Kent before. I know him well enough to go to him and I know he can be trusted implicitly. We needn't tell him everything, and you needn't worry about his going to the police."

She got up. "I'm going to phone him. You needn't actually agree until you've seen him and talked with him."

Fresh Ideas

She picked up the telephone, remembered she did not know the number and replaced it. She reached for the directory, found what she wanted; then as she was about to make the call, she thought of something else and sat quite still, a narrowness coming about her eyes.

"What is it?" Delia asked. "What's the matter?"

"I just thought of something." Joyce went to the desk, found the envelope and opened it. "We should have a copy of these things," she said.

"But why?"

"I don't know. But we should. How do we know what's going to happen later or how important the envelope may become? Why not have these things photographed? Then, if we lose them—well, who knows? Kent would do it—why shouldn't we?"

Delia leaned forward, interested now, but skeptical.

"Can you do it?"

"No, but I'll get someone who can. Someone from the paper."

"From the paper?" Delia said. "But that will be just one more person to know—"

"It will be no such thing," Joyce said. "And will you please stop worrying? I realize the risk as well as you do."

"Yes, but—"

"The one I have in mind won't be able to read French. I'm sure; nor Spanish either. He'll have no idea what those papers say, and even if he did you'd never have to worry. Really, Delia, there are some people you can trust."

She was telephoning before Delia could add anything more, and for the next minute or two she talked rapidly and earnestly, explaining what she wanted.

"He can't come for about an hour," she said when she hung up. "Somebody is out to dinner and he has to stay in the office. Then he'll come right over. And that reminds me. We're going to need dinner ourselves."

"Oh, I couldn't eat a thing," Delia said.

"Nuts," said Joyce, inelegantly

Persuading Eddy

Eddie Lacey was blond, blue-eyed and freckled. He was not more than twenty-one or two, and when he had been told what Joyce wanted him to do he looked decidedly uncomfortable.

"I don't know," he said. "What's the boss going to say?"

"Kent?" Joyce said. "He's not going to find out, is he, Eddy?"

"You'd be surprised the things he finds out."

"This is between us, though."

"Yeah, but I work for him."

"And I know how loyal you are," Joyce said. "But this is something personal. Kent isn't going to know anything about it and if he should find out I'll tell him. I forced you to do it, and you hadn't any choice."

Lacey grinned. "And that's no lie."

Joyce handed him the two clippings and the copies of the marriage and divorce certificates. "Did you bring the right sort of attachment so we'll be able to read these after you photograph them?"

Lacey said he had. "But that photostat won't come up too clear," he added. "The prints will have to be blown up quite a bit."

"That's all right. When you've made your exposures you can develop and enlarge them right here in Kent's darkroom."

"Oh—oh," said Lacey.

"Now what?"

"Guys don't like other guys fooling around with their darkrooms." Trouble sobered him until, catching sight of the look on Joyce's face, he shrugged and grinned. "Okay. I might as well give it the works."

For the next half hour Joyce and Della stood by while Eddy Lacey unpacked his plate-case, set up his camera and lights and thumb-tacked the first clipping to a bread-board Joyce had purloined from the kitchen. Except for an occasional muttering sound, Lacey worked silently, and as soon as he had finished with his camera, he took his plates to the darkroom down the hall.

Joyce telephoned Jack Fenner while Lacey was in the darkroom and after a brief and guarded explanation secured his consent to listen to the rest of her story.

"He'll be busy until nine-thirty," Joyce told Della, "and I said we could meet him at the Copley."

"If only we didn't have to tell him," Della said. "If only—"

"I know. But it's not going to be as bad as you think, darling. And you'll like Jack. He's amusing in a hard-boiled sort of way, and quite honest."

Soon Eddy had four, eleven by fourteen, glossy white prints going through the washer and when Joyce saw them she knew they would do.

"I used the biggest paper I could find," Lacey said. "I don't know if they're good enough."

"Oh, they are, Eddy. And you are a darling."

"I could easily be a chump, too," said Lacey.

Joyce brought out an oversized blotting book from a cabinet and put it on the table.

"They ought to be ferrotyped," Lacey said.

"I know," Lacey said. "But this will do. It will get them out of the way and"—she saw that the negatives were dry—"I'll take care of the negatives."

About 1,200,000 olive trees have been planted in Argentina, which has imported an average in excess of 33,000,000 kilograms of oil annually for the last 15 years.

The Stars Say—

For Thursday, July 9

THIS SEEMS to be an urgent time for concentrating the energies as well as the assets for the purpose of withdrawing from a static or crystallized state of affairs and orienting them in the direction of new achievements and fresh objectives of no mean order. Many factors favor this decision and large corporations or political bodies may be found ready for clever, original and well-organized propositions, but use tact, diplomacy and subtlety or shrewdness. The public or community may also approve and cooperate. Young persons may find much pleasure, affection or romantic attachments as well as business opportunity.

Those whose birthday it is should endeavor to solidify their interests and evaluate their assets in an effort to be swift and decisive in the direction of major achievements, with increasing and enduring results, even though new tactics, ideas and fresh objectives may be the inspiration. With tact, diplomacy and cleverness, shrewd and ingenious proposals will find cooperation from large organizations as well as public interests. The young should partake of these exceptional opportunities and as well find much pleasure in friendships, social activities or romantic adventure, possibly courtship and marriage.

A child born on this day should have originality, ingenuity and exceptional imagination or intuition, accompanied by subtlety, deep insight and sound reasoning ability. It should have romantic, social and domestic happiness.

SHIP SINKINGS IN CARIBBEAN TOTAL 110

Latest Navy Announcement Brings Merchant Losses Up.

By The Associated Press

The sinking of another U. S. merchant vessel in the Caribbean, reported by the navy today put at 110 the unofficial tabulation by The Associated Press of united and neutral nations' merchant ship losses in that area since Pearl Harbor.

The torpedoing and sinking of the merchantman a month ago with the loss of two men of a 31-man crew brought total sinkings to 341 in the Western Atlantic since December 7.

At an east coast port, the navy reported that the attack on the merchantman occurred in daylight, lasting only seven minutes before the ship was sunk.

The navy said that one of the ship's two lifeboats was destroyed when the torpedo exploded, but the men launched the remaining boat and two life-rafts.

The sub commander and his men, the navy said, gave the survivors their position and the exact mileage to the nearest land.

After talking with the men in the lifeboat and on the rafts, the sub commander ordered his craft in among the floating debris and picked up some of the cases of cargo from the sinking vessel.

The navy said the survivors reached a Caribbean port in seven days. For five days the lifeboat towed the two rafts, on which there were 16 men, and on the last two days all 29 men crowded into the lifeboat.

Coney Azoff Wins Little Grand Circuit Feature Race

Free-for-All Pace Features Tonight's Speed Card.

By LOREN W. TIBBALS
Marion Star Sports Editor

HIGHLIGHTING tonight's Little Grand Circuit harness racing session at the county fairground track will be the long-awaited free-for-all pace which rematches several horses first seen here last Saturday night.

All but Peter the Tramp, owned by Arlo Edwards of Galena, of last week's three-heat victors are again entered in the event. In addition, two late arrivals at the local race plant have been nominated to start in the race. The horses, Doctor B. Grattan, driven by Boring, and Guy Win, driven by Campbell, recently completed a successful campaign at the Anderson, Ind., track.

Saturday night's race was anything but a speed spectacle but for actual racing, it has had no comparison in the current meet. Merry Mite, owned by R Lennox of Richwood, and Callie C., owned by Frank Callahan of Tiffin, are expected to play important roles in the race. Both were leading candidates for honors in the last meeting although not heat winners.

2:17 Pace Also Good

The 2.17 pace stake race matching eight of the leading horses now stabled at the fairgrounds is expected to be as exciting as the featured free-for-all speed contest. Jimmy Stately, winner of the 2:18 pace on Saturday's card, is entered along with The Walnut Abbe, Sally G and others. Val Grandstaff of Galion has entered his prize mare, Princess Mack, in the event.

A 2:28 trotting event will round out tonight's all-star card. This race matches several green and untried horses.

Entries in tonight's races are:

2:28 trot ($300)—Lillian Peters, by Peter S. (J. Gordon); Flo Meadows, by Guy Abbe (Boring); Marino Stout, (Riel); Patrick C., by Hollyrood Prince (Bennett); Hollyrood Bachus, by Hollyrood Prince (Tallman); Camilla Ce-Sar, by Don Ce-Sar (Erskine); Archie Volo, by True Volo (Morris); and Nita Reynolds, by Dick Reynolds (A. Gordon).

2:17 pace ($500)—Jimmy Stately, by James R. Braden (Carlock); Susan Dale, by Hal Dale (Perry); The Walnut Abbe, by Bert Abbe (Smith); Princess Mack, by Peter Nutonia (Grandstaff); H. F. G., by Agile (Noble); Theo Volo, by Dillon Volo (Biehl); Mike the First, by Arion Guy (Vallery); and Sally G., by Single G (Burgett).

Free-for-All pace ($300)—Lady Maude B., by Todd Stout (Myott); Dorothy Bob, by Hollywood Bob (Myers); Merry Mite, by Volomite (Perry); Counter Direct, by Counterpart (Huber); Woodbars, by Iron Bars (Disbennett); Betty M., by Corporal Lee (Mahoney); Guy Win by Guy Abbe (Campbell); Doctor B. Grattan, by Silent Grattan (Boring); and Callie C., by Single G (Vallery).

Blackwell Wins

Art Blackwell of Goshen, Ind., sent Coney Azoff, a roan gelding by Jayzoff and owned by John Alshire of Goshen, Ind., to victory in last night's featured 2.16 trot stake race. The horse won in straight heats.

Jake Mahoney of Indianapolis, Ind., guided Tarzan, a bay gelding by Double Great, to three heat victories in the 2:20 class trot. Clocked at 2 12½ for the first mile, Tarzan completed the second and third heats in 2:11.

Ernie Smith of Washington C. H. added to his local driving success by sending Dear Emile, a black mare by Volomite, to victory in two of the three 2:26 pacing heats. Moon Flower, driven by Gabe Cartin of Hanover and owned by Mrs. L. A. LaBorteaux of Perrysburg, won the second heat when Smith's mount broke at the barrier. Despite the bad start the

Angott Wins Third Straight Victory Over Montgomery

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA, July 8—Lightweight Champion Sammy Angott had to his credit today a third straight win over Philadelphia's Bob Montgomery, but his latest victory has started a controversy that may lead to a fourth meeting.

Angott bulled and mauled his way to a split decision over Montgomery at Shibe Park last night in a 12-round non-title scrap. The decision was booed by many in the crowd of 16,050 that contributed to a gross gate of $33,553.50, but there seemed to be as many who declared the decision was just.

The fight was decided by the vote of Referee Spud Murphy after the judges split.

Springfield Advances To 2nd Place on Twin Win

By The Associated Press

ZANESVILLE, O., July 8—Springfield's Cardinals, who turned the cellar spot over to Zanesville three weeks ago, held third place in the Mid-Atlantic league today after defeating Zanesville 6-1 and 6-2 in a double-header last night.

Manager Walt Alston homered with the bases full in the ninth inning to give Springfield the nightcap.

Dayton defeated Canton 9 to 3 and Erie edged Charleston 5 to 4.

FELLER IS CHEERED EVEN WHEN JERKED IN SECOND INNING

Cleveland Service Benefit Game Filled with Colorful Sideights.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 8—It was like old times when Bob Feller walked to the familiar Cleveland stadium pitching mound last night. The floodlights blazed at full glare, and more than 60,000 of the faithful lustily applauded the mention of his name as the starting hurler for Uncle Sam's boys.

But although this lean, drawn pitcher who once was Rapid Robert at $45,000 a year, was quickly proven to be only a boatswain's mate, he still carried the crowd's applause when Lieutenant Mickey Cochrane replaced him with Johnny Rigney in the second inning, with the American leaguers three runs and four hits to the good.

"I just couldn't seem to get loosened up," the majors' erstwhile strikeout king commented.

The world's next heavyweight boxing champion will come out of the nation's armed forces, in the opinion of Lieut. Jack Dempsey of the Coast Guard.

"It's a sure thing," said the Manassa Mauler, here for the service all-star baseball game last night.

"Just think of the boys who are going to find out what they can do in the ring. When these kids find out they can fight, and learn how to get into fighting condition, you'll see some real boxers developed."

* * *

The Service All-Stars couldn't get any runs, but they may have set something of a record in their clash last night with the American Leaguers.

The first six batters in Lieut. Mickey Cochrane's starting lineup were lefties. The National League had started off with a piddling five in its equally unsuccessful effort against the junior leaguers' right-handed moundsmen.

* * *

Speaking of lefties, hard luck honors easily went to Mickey Harris, the former Boston Red Sox flinger who came all the way from the Canal Zone to pitch one inning—and be tagged for two runs and three hits, all of them for extra bases.

* * *

Department of disapproval (as registered on the unofficial boometer): Slump-Ridden Joe DiMaggio, when his name was announced in the starting lineups over the public address system—Joe singled off Bob Feller in his first appearance and went out twice on pops and grounded into a double play . . . Joe McCarthy's removal of Lou Boudreau, the Indians' manager-shortstop, drew loud third-inning boos.

* * *

Things the customers were happy about: The full announcements of players' backgrounds on the P. A. horns for the benefit of the occasional fans . . . The service boys' two hits over tall Sid Hudson to start the seventh, bringing rhythmic applause, then loud cheering—until the Washington hurler bore down . . . COLUMBUS PITCHER CROUCH DONS SPECS, BEATS LOUISVILLE

His Ninth Victory of Year Enables Red Birds To Hold Second Place.

By The Associated Press

American Association batters, who have been having trouble enough in recent appearances against Pitcher Bill Crouch, can expect even greater precision pitching from the Columbus right hander.

Crouch, unbeaten in his last four starts, took the mound last night wearing specs. It was his first appearance with glasses, but neither they nor the Louisville batsmen disturbed him. He shut out the Colonels in all but two innings, allowed eight hits and won 9 to 5.

It was his ninth triumph of the year and enabled the Red Birds to maintain their one game second place margin over Milwaukee. Columbus also picked up a half game on the leaders when Kansas City split a double header with St. Paul. The Apostles took the seven-inning opener, 2 to 1, and Kansas City the second contest, 5 to 1.

Milwaukee nosed out Minneapolis in a slugfest, 9 to 8. Toledo turned back Indianapolis, 6 to 5.

MIZE MISSED GAG PLAY

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It'll be some time before Johnny Mize, Giants' first sacker is embarrassed as much as he was in a recent series with Cincinnati. Johnny tried to work the antiquated hidden ball trick on Eddie Joost, Reds, infielder. Eddie adroitly reached around Mize, snatched the ball from his glove and with a grin tossed the ball out to the pitcher.

Feller and Other Stars Now in Military Service Lose in Benefit Game.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 8 — The American league All-Stars are proven by all tests that they are, currently, the mightiest in baseball.

Before a patriotic turnout of 62,094 spectators in Cleveland's municipal stadium last night, the triumphant American leaguers not only proved their pitching was too sharp for eyes dulled by months of devotion to another task and their bats too potent for pitching arms grown rusty in the armed services of their country.

The American leaguer routed the great Bob Feller of the navy, Cleveland's own freckled, with a three-run outburst at the start and then went on to trounce Lieut. Gordon (Mickey) Cochrane's Soldiers and Sailors, 5 to 0.

For six innings the American leaguers clung to a 3-0 lead collected at Feller's expense in the first two, and then seized up the game in the seventh with a two-run attack on Mickey Harris, former Boston Red Sox lefty.

"Iron Mike" Cochrane, once manager of the Detroit Tigers, and one of the greatest catchers in baseball history, took the defeat calmly.

Lose In First

"We lost in the first inning," Cochrane explained. "We had the bases loaded and a single would have changed the whole story. We just muffed a big opportunity. That's all. You don't get a chance to beat a team like those American leaguers every day in the week. Poor Feller didn't have a thing. I've never seen him get belted like that. It proves that he wasn't there—that his duties in the navy have robbed him of his timing, his control."

Best looking pitcher of the night was John Rigney, late of the Chicago White Sox, now a "gob" at the Great Lakes Naval Training station. The 27-year-old Rigney went to Feller's rescue with no one out in the second, and pitched five runless innings, allowing the mighty American leaguers only three hits, one a miserable infield grounder that Rigney was unable to field. Rigney left the game in the sixth to make way for a pinch hitter, Johnny Lucadello, formerly of the St. Louis Browns.

The service All-Stars threatened chiefly in the first inning, when Jim Bagby Jr., of the Cleveland Indians was on the mound. Bagby, whose father made pitching history with Cleveland 22 years ago, got the bases loaded with one out, chiefly through his wildness. He walked Benny McCoy of the Philadelphia A's, and then Don Padgett of the St. Louis Cardinals singled. Cecil Travis of the Washington Senators also was passed, filling the bases. Jake Grace of the St. Louis Browns looked at three strikes and Johnny Sturm, Yankees' first baseman, ended it by grounding.

Ovation Greets Feller

The homecoming of Feller, making his first appearance in Cleveland's ball field since late last September, was painful. When he proudly strolled to the mound, cheers greeted him. After Lou Boudreau, 24-year-old Cleveland manager, had flied out, Tommy Henrich of the Yankees rolled a scratch single towards the box, which Feller was unable to reach. Ted Williams of the Boston cloister, was passed, and Joe DiMaggio blasted a single to center, scoring Henrich. Then Rudy York, Tiger first baseman, lifted a high fly to right, with Williams scoring.

In the second, Ken Keltner, Cleveland's sparkling third baseman, slammed a triple into deep center and Buddy Rosar, a Yankee catcher, whacked a single into the left field grass, with Keltner scoring. That finished Feller.

When Harris started in the seventh, Phil Rizzuto of the Yanks slammed a double, stole third and counted on a triple by Williams, who previously had been passed three times. DiMaggio flied out, and George McQuinn of the St. Louis Browns, who had replaced York at first, rapped off another three-bagger to right and Williams counted with the final tally.

In all, the American leaguers collected 10 hits: the Soldiers and Sailors six.

NEW YORK, July 8—The International league's "North-South" fuss tonight is next on the list of all-star baseball attractions and there may be a lot of kids in there who will be up in the big show in a few more seasons . . . Shag Shaughnessy, the Inls' prexy, claims the squad has a half million bucks worth of talent if you could buy it . . . Besides a dozen "major" football games, Bernie Bierman's Iowa Seahawks offer spectators at their home tilts a parade of cadets, two cheering sections and the big Seahawk band as extra attractions. Many complaints from all the pre-flight schools, however, is too many 160 pounders . . . When a soldier from Boston drew a furlough in San Francisco he wrote home: "Visited Joe DiMaggio's restaurant. The food was swell but the prices were as nigh as his batting average used to be." Joe admits it would be hard to eat there regularly on a private's pay.

• • •

Hear the Birdies Sing—Wiffy Cox, veteran Washington pro, has figured out a way for all his Congressional Country club golfers to become par-busters . . . Instead of everyone trying to beat theoretically perfect figures, Wiffy would establish a private par for each golfer, based on what he might expect to do on a good average day . . . for this golf author, the card might read "No. 4, 447 yards Par 7 (if the drive doesn't slice into the swamp by the dogleg and the approaches stay clear of deep traps)."

Today's Guest Star—John Mooney, Salt Lake Telegram: "J. L. Johnson is irked because Fighter Bob Pastor would rather play golf than fight. After trying both, who can blame Bob for seeing birdies the easier way?"

Escaped Tiger Added To Alexandria's Alarms

CAIRO, July 7—As if nightly air raid alarms and an enemy army some 70 miles away were not enough, a tiger broke loose from the Alexandria zoo today and headed for the city. Keepers' shots finished that menace.

FELLER LIFTS POP FLY AS SERVICE STARS LOSE

Coming to bat for the All-Service team in the second inning of the game between the best players of the United States armed forces and the American league All-Stars, Bob Feller, above, hits a pop fly to Third Baseman Ken Keltner, his former teammate on the Cleveland Indians. Feller, now a chief petty officer in the United States Navy, was charged with the defeat as the Service team bowed to the Americans 5 to 0, in the game in Cleveland stadium. The catcher is Buddy Rosar of the New York Yankees.

STATE GETS DECISION IN COLLECTION CASE

Supreme Court Action Makes $40,000 in Fees Available.

Special to The Star

MARYSVILLE, July 8—Ohio is to be $40,000 richer as a result of a verdict by the supreme court in a case argued by Representative Clifton Caryl of Union county on behalf of Donald R. Stubbs of Westerville, O., a citizen taxpayer employed at the Indianola Florists in Columbus.

The case was a suit to compel Cylon W. Wallace, state registrar of motor vehicles, to collect that sum from the Railway Express Agency, Inc., for motor vehicle taxes for 1929. Judges Williams, Hart and Bettman concurred in the opinion, and Turner and Matthias, dissented, according to a report received by Representative Caryl.

The suit developed from the sale of the property of the American Express Company to the Railway Express Agency Inc. in February 1929. It was argued in the suit that the purchasing company should have purchased new license tags for its 591 vehicles which the new company proceeded to operate although title to the vehicles was not transferred until the end of that year.

The decision will set a precedent to be followed in future cases of a like nature, Representative Caryl who is a Marysville attorney, stated. Mr. Stubbs is a former Marysville resident.

GALION SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

Three Vacancies in Teaching Staff Filled by Board at Tuesday Meeting.

Special to The Star

GALION, July 8—Three more vacancies were filled Tuesday night when the Galion board of education met to complete their school staff. Those hired were John Anderson of Coshocton, physical education instructor and junior high coach, Janet Richardson of Marion, girls' physical education teacher, and Ruth Miller of Columbus art instructor.

Anderson has been teaching at Dresden where he was head coach. He is a graduate of Georgetown college where he played football and basketball. Last year's record for his basketball team included 21 wins and five defeats. Anderson will be the third man in the Galion athletic set-up, assisting Jon Lympen and Robert Sheffer.

Miss Richardson will fill the vacancy which occurred after the marriage of Mary Helen Welsh of Ashland, who was hired as girls' physical instructor at the May meeting of the board of education. Ruth Miller will act as art instructor to fill the position left vacant after the marriage of Betty Cave Miller.

The resignation of M. J. McGurk of Terre Haute Ind., as machine shop instructor, was accepted.

Because of the emergency in local employment the board of education has decided that the boys in the senior class vocational shop will receive their practical work in the afternoons this year. These boys will be given their academic and related subjects in the morning session of school in order to allow them to do co-operative work in the afternoons.

Appointment of O. J. DeWitt as building superintendent to fill the position left vacant by M. S. McCammon was ratified. Prior to this appointment the board of education had read a letter which is to be sent to Mr. McCammon expressing appreciation of his 32 years of service in the Galion schools. Mr. McCammon presented his resignation on June 30 because of ill health.

SLOW RETREAT HITS MARKET

Price Movements Irregular, But Most Leaders Edge Slightly Higher.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 8 — Stock market price movements were irregular today but most leaders edged a little higher in face of general concern over Germany's crush gains in Russia.

Small selling, attributed to the foreign reports and President Roosevelt's warning of a possible government seizure of all automobile tires, brought a slow retreat. A sharp tapering of offerings was the signal for a reversal of trends and a considerable number of key industrials were ahead fractions to around a point. A few issues remained in minus territory.

Among the better share performers were Douglas Aircraft, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward and Owens-Illinois.

American Telephone, American Can, Santa Fe, and Sears Roebuck were backward much of the time.

Opinion in merchandising circles was that July retail trade would show a relatively small gain over the same month last year in dollar volume in contrast with the generally good year-to-year comparisons on June business.

At this time last year, it was pointed out, retail spending was in a sharp upward curve because of fears of shortages and excise taxes. The federal reserve board index of department store sales rose to 115 per cent of the 1923-25 average in July, 1941, on its way to a record 134 per cent in August.

Marion Guard Unit Inducted

of draft age. All equipment will be furnished by the state.

The only difference between the State Guard and Marion's two National Guard units which are now a part of the United States army, is that the National Guard was subject to call by the President and governor, while the State Guard is subject to call by the governor only.

One of the chief contributions to the success of the program and ceremony was the 50-piece post band from Fort Hayes in Columbus, playing under the direction of Warrant Officer H. M. Wilson. The band played 1400 concerts and what pleased the crowd as much as the fine marual music, including the stirring songs of the field artillery, marine corps, navy and air corps, were the many popular songs, including "Tangarine," with Dick Stein as vocalist, "The Waltz You Saved for Me," "Tiger Rag," "Three Little Sisters," "Johnny Doughboy," and "Somebody Else Is Taking My Place," jokingly termed the theme song of the selectees passing through Fort Hayes. Sgt. James Turner sang the field artillery song.

The band played a particularly excellent arrangement of the national anthem as the closing number on the program, after playing the accompaniment for one verse of "America," sung by the entire crowd under the direction of L. G. Jones, public school music supervisor.

Civilian Defense Review

The induction ceremony was preceded by a review of all civilian defense units. The hundreds of men, women and Girl Scouts marched onto the track from the field at the north of the stadium passed in front of the reviewing stand in the center section of the stadium and proceeded around the track to the south side, marching to the field in perfect formation to take their places for the actual induction. The post band, standing directly across the track from the reviewing stand, set the tempo for the marchers.

Leading the marchers onto the track were George D. Hildebrandt, commander of Marion's civilian military training program, Capt. E. L. Hill who held the rank of major in the Marion Rifles and who will report Friday at Fort Hayes for active service, Commander E. M. Breithaupt of Bird-McGinnis Post No. 162, American Legion, and Mr. Hildebrandt's aide, Robert Yazel. At the reviewing stand they fell out of line and took places in the stand.

After the Legion colors came the Girl Scouts, the air raid wardens, auxiliary police, members of the civilian medical corps, men and colors of Marion Post No. 2313, Veterans of Foreign Wars, headed by the commander, N. V. Foreman, the visiting State Guard units, the Marion Rifles, the Women's Ambulance Corps and the volunteer drivers of the fleet of Omar Baking Co. trucks which have been turned over to the medical corps of civilian defense to use at the first aid centers for gas and medical cases.

Accident Simulated

The program started with the motorcycle corps of the civilian defense setup making several laps of the track. On the second lap there was an "accident" at the southeast curve. One of the men was "injured" and the Merle H. Hughes ambulance drove onto the tracks and up to the scene. A uniformed nurse jumped out, stretcher bearers lifted the "injured" man to the cot and he was whisked around the track and out to the south side of the stadium.

The demonstration was staged by Dr. T. H. Sutherland, who is in charge of the casualty station gas and medical section of the civilian defense program.

As the program got under way aerial bombs were fired and two civil air patrol planes from the Marion airport circled the stadium.

At the far east side of the field the air raid wardens gathered and under the direction of Earl H. Ruhlman, chief air raid warden, gave a demonstration of extinguishing incendiary bombs.

When the bombs exploded a group of men encircled the area with rope, the actual procedure in England to keep everyone but trained wardens out of the area. Other wardens showed two methods of extinguishing incendiaries, one the soda method and the other the smothering-with-sand method.

City firemen were on hand in event the bomb demonstration got out of control. However, the volunteers worked effectively.

Emergency Ambulances

In the meantime a fleet of 27 Omar Baking Co. trucks drew up and parked outside the fence on the east side of the grounds. The drivers have volunteered extra time to work with the medical corps, according to Dr. H. K. Mouser, head of the medical section. In operation as ambulance service, each truck will hold four injured persons or two stretcher cases.

At 8 o'clock the Fort Hayes band, which came to Marion in three army trucks, which were met at the Harding memorial and escorted to the stadium by the motorcycle corps, as were the cars bearing the Ohio State Guard officials, swung onto the track in march formation and paraded past the reviewing stand, taking places on benches in the field opposite the stand.

After the first concert Supt. E. E. Holt of the city schools stepped to the microphone and announced that free will offerings would be taken for the souvenir programs distributed by members of the Woman's Ambulance Corps, who also served as ushers.

The attractive programs, with pictures of the Marion Rifles officers and a general view of the Rifles, included the program, a brief summary of the Rifles' history, a roster of Co. H and a list of invited guests.

The contributions, totalling $136 went to pay for the expenses incurred, including the providing of lunch for the post band, the visiting State Guard units and the official guests at the Hildebrandt home at 504 South State street, and to the Rifles fund.

Bucyrus Veteran Speaks

The address by William C. Beer of Bucyrus, attorney and veteran of the Spanish American War and World War I, touched on the fallacy of "peace pacts" and "disarmament" and the need for continued military strength after the war.

"Now we know that present safety and future peace and happiness in these United States will be secured and protected and perpetuated only by the men behind the guns," he declared.

"There is only one language that a bully of the Nazi, a treacherous Italian and a sneaking skunk of a Jap understands and that is force backed by bayonets, guns and millions and millions of tons of TNT, and when this language has been bombed into their heads until they have had all they can take, the American flag will be the symbol of freedom and power throughout the world."

The only decisive issue today, he asserted, is the war. "Other matters can be settled afterward in our own American way."

In opening his address Mr. Beer cited the valor of the men under Washington, Andrew Jackson, Grant, McKinley and Pershing and was applauded when he spoke of General MacArthur and said "These men, with the tradition of American armies behind them, will win this war!" Applause again interrupted when he declared, "There will be no compromise and no temporizing in this war because this is the fight to the finish."

He said there can be no temporizing with "international murderers and racketeers," and spoke of the treachery of the Pearl Harbor attack.

Urges Preserving Gains

He was applauded again when he declared: "When we will have won this war what we will have gained by force of arms we will retain by force of arms."

"The misguided idealist has had his day, but in his day and in his way he almost kept us from having an army or any guns or any preparation. But from now on these United States will have the guns, the men and the equipment with which to wage war. Pagan Germans and heathen Japs will not be a menace to us because they cannot be against the armed strength this nation is preparing for war."

At the close of the address, and on behalf of the Marion Rifles, Superintendent Holt presented Captain Hill with a pen and pencil set. The same kind of set was presented to Capt. Paul Lawther, who held the rank of captain in the Rifles and was commander of the Women's Ambulance corps before he left yesterday to report for active service at Camp Perry.

Spontaneous applause burst from the crowd and Captain Hill said, "Indeed, the Marion Rifles is a fine bunch of men. They came in voluntarily and are filling a real need in this community."

The program was announced over a loudspeaker system by Lou Marsh and Hugh Morehead of Station WMRN.

Acting as host in the reviewing stand was Robert T. Mason, manager of the broadcasting station, who worked with Mr. Hildebrandt and Dr. Sutherland in transferring the volunteers from Marion Rifles into Co. H.

In Reviewing Stand

With Adjutant General Parquet and Colonel Christy in the reviewing stand were the following officers of the State Guard: Col. Robert E. Boyd, Lt. Col. Earl W. Brannon, Lt. Col. William A. Drake, Major Otis B. Harris, Major Palmer L. Cordray, Capt. C. J. Bowler, Lt. Elmer Lambert and Lt. Russell R. Rine.

With Majors Sears were Lt. Powell Whitfield, Lt. John Hull, Lt. William Keegan and Lt. Bryon Skillen of the ordinance department, Mrs. Sears, Mrs. Whitfield and Mrs. Hull.

The engineers' corps was represented by Capt. H. D. L. Van Bockern, Capt. Rowland P. Campbell, Capt. Floyd W. Freeman, Capt. J. M. Powell and Second Lt. William F. Schipper.

Present strength of the Rifles is five officers and 92 men and attached to the Rifles is the Women's Ambulance corps of six officers and 101 women and 30 Ambulance Motor corps members. The Rifles' equipment includes six heavy trucks, and wooden replicas of Springfield rifles.

WHEAT PRICES RISE AS BUYING SURGES

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 8 — In the sharpest advance in weeks, wheat prices today rose almost 3 cents a bushel at one stage as buying expanded to large scale proportions. At a peak of $1.21¼, July wheat was the highest it has been since May and about 6 cents above last Monday's low.

Renewal of flour business and buying inspired by Senate passage of legislation to raise government loan rates on basic crops, including wheat, prompted the upturn.

Although late profit taking and hedging reduced the gains by more than a cent, wheat closed 2¾-3½ cents higher than yesterday, July $1.20, September $1.22¾-¾.

Corn, up a cent or more at one time in sympathy with wheat, finished ¾-1 higher, July 87¾, September 90¼-90; oats 1¼-1½ higher; rye 2¼-2½ higher, soybeans ½-1½ higher. Rye was as much as 3⅝ cents at one time with wheat.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D

Infantile Paralysis

About two years ago Miss Elizabeth Kenny of Brisbane, Australia, come to America to present her method of treating infantile paralysis. The idea behind the method, as pointed out in this column several times, was early attention to muscle spasm, first by the use of moist heat and then by movements of the affected muscles. The principle point of departure between this method and the ones employed by most orthopedic surgeons heretofore is in the abandonment of splints and casts in the early stage.

Miss Kenny has been working in the United States for two years in recognized clinics and the reports of her work have just been published. The report states that the patients treated have all made a far more satisfactory recovery than they would have made by any previously known method. No deformities have occurred in spite of the complete omission of splinting.

It is unfortunate that the newspaper reports to the public have so often used the word "cure" in relation to the Kenny treatment. It is not a cure in the sense that it is guaranteed to prevent any possible paralysis following a severe case of infantile paralysis. What it does do is to reduce the deformities, which are a sequel of the disease, to a minimum.

In order to explain what is meant by spasm, it must be remembered that every part of the body, every joint, has two sets of muscles which work antagonistically. For instance, you have a set of muscles which raise your wrist and one which pulls it down. Now if in an attack of infantile paralysis one of these sets of muscles is paralyzed, the other will, by going into spasm, pull the joint awry and perhaps result in a permanent paralysis.

Miss Kenney's idea is to calm these muscles down, first by the application of moist heat and then by moving the muscles gently, try to restore as much natural balance as possible. No one should expect, even with this treatment, that every case will come out without any paralysis at all.

The following words are those of an experienced physician who has watched the Kenny method in operation: "Paralysis is unfortunately a feature of the disease, but paralysis proved after all to be a minor consideration in most cases of infantile paralysis. Muscle spasm and incoordination are far more damaging to the bodily mechanics. The Kenny method when properly applied will reduce the crippling effects of the disease of infantile paralysis. Within the limits of the present knowledge and means of treatment of the disease it offers the patient the maximum assurance of recovery and restoration of function of his motor system. Deformities have been outlawed."

I know that a great many orthopedic surgeons are visiting the Kenny clinic at the present time in order to see for themselves the methods employed and the effects of treatment. If that I have talked to agree that it is an enormous advance in the prevention of atrophy, deformity of muscles, the rapidity of recovering and the extent of recovery.

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

IT WAS the second time within two days—the first had been my talk with my brother-cousin, Jack Beckett—that the memory of Hal Meredith had come vividly to my mind, although in this surprising interview with Katharine his name had not been mentioned.

Hal Meredith, handsome, brilliant alienist who had loved Katharine since he was an interne and she a student nurse in the same hospital—I could see him now as on that day long ago, standing with Kathryn under the big elm near the farmhouse, pleading I knew for the happiness he thought, and with some justice, that she was quixotically denying him because of mistaken loyalty to the husband who apparently had gone out of her life.

Jack is my "brother-cousin," the only blood kin I have. My early affection for him was exceedingly strong, and he still is very dear to me. Yet through the years of his inexplicable silence to Katharine, my heart had been hot within me for his cruel neglect of her.

Even the remorse and high resolve for atonement Jack had showed, when I penetrated the disguise which he though made it safe for him to return to the United States and complete his dangerous enterprise, had not lessened my feeling that Hal Meredith, were he given the opportunity, would make Katharine happier than Jack could.

But I could not bring these things out into the open now, Katharine's question. "You see, don't you, Madge, what I must do?" still hung between us.

"Yes. Indeed I know, dear girl," I said. "You want to search the hospitals."

All Night Vigil

"You dear, understanding soul!" she said. "That is what I must do, and I must start at once. It will be an all night vigil."

I knew now what I must do. In some way I must keep her until I got word to my father of her arrival and her intention. It was impossible to shake her conviction that Jack had written that pitiful summons to her, but I was convinced that the letter was a clever forgery.

If that were the case, Katharine's liberty, perhaps her life, would not be worth a farthing if she should go alone on her contemplated tour of the hospitals.

In all probability, I deduced, the brains of the gang had surmised that Jack was the queer servant working for Professor Diswell at his Connecticut mountain home.

And of course hospitals would suggest Katharine to them—Katharine, with her long nursing experience and consequent entree to the hospitals. They might well have sent her the cleverly concocted message, expecting her to react exactly as she had done.

But whether she found Jack or not, it was not on the cards for the gangsters to permit her to return safely to the hotel.

I knew, however, that no ordinary excuse would deter Katharine, even for a minute. In my desperation I resorted to what in ordinary circumstances I would have dubbed a despicable ruse. I rose to my feet, spoke tremulously:

"Won't you have even a coup of tea?" I asked, letting my voice trail away faintly, then I staggered and apparently saved myself from falling only by catching at the back of the nearest chair.

Katharine was at my side in an instant, holding me up, and characteristically spoke with gentle firmness as she propelled me toward my bedroom door.

"You must lie down at once," she said, "and tell me where you keep your medicines. You must have some . . ." she named a drug —"for that dizziness."

She was taking my pulse as she spoke, her own problem shelved for the moment for my need. I felt terribly ashamed of my deception, but her solicitude and prompt action were giving me the opportunity I needed.

"I'm sorry," I said faintly, my head inert upon the pillow, "but I have none. If you'll telephone the drug store they'll send some right over. The telephone is in the living room."

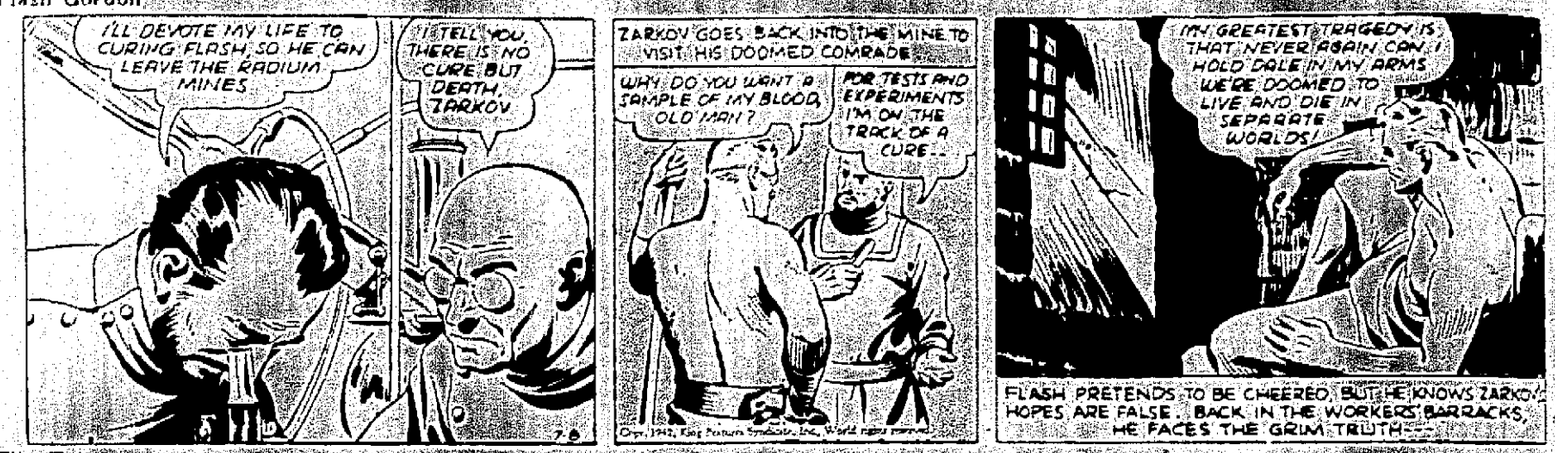
Flash Gordon



I'LL DEVOTE MY LIFE TO CURING FLASH, SO HE CAN LEAVE THE RADIUM MINES
I'LL TELL YOU, THERE IS NO CURE BUT DEATH, ZARKOV
ZARKOV GOES BACK INTO THE MINE TO VISIT HIS DOOMED COMRADE
WHY DO YOU WANT A SAMPLE OF MY BLOOD, OLD MAN?
FOR TESTS AND EXPERIMENTS I'M ON THE TRACK OF A CURE...
MY GREATEST TRAGEDY IS THAT, NEVER AGAIN CAN I HOLD DALE IN MY ARMS. WE'RE DOOMED TO LIVE AND DIE IN SEPARATE WORLDS!
FLASH PRETENDS TO BE CHEERED, BUT HE KNOWS ZARKOV'S HOPES ARE FALSE. BACK IN THE WORKERS' BARRACKS, HE FACES THE GRIM TRUTH...
